CHILDREN WAITING FOR NEW PARENTS

SOMETIMES ORPHANS ARE NOT WANTED ANYWHERE.

LONGING FOR HOMES

Local Committee Meets Last Night And Examines Applications For Children—Here One Week.

This is a story of children longing for homes—longing for a dad and mother to love them and give them the inherent right of childhood—a home.

Placed on the auction counter awaiting the bids of prospective foster fathers and mothers is the life of the orphan child as he is taken over the country. Sometimes he is disappointed because it seems that he is not wanted anywhere. He laughs and cries just as any other American youngster does when he looks up into the eyes of a possible "dad" or "mudder."

J. W. Swan of the Children's Aid Society of New York, who has brought a number of children to Maryville to be placed in homes here, says that a great many of the children come from orphanages. But very frequently they are surrendered by the courts when it is found that the father or mother cannot take care of them properly. In a number of cases, one or both of their parents have died and they are left alone in the world to battle their way as best they can.

In a few instances, Mr. Swan says, a mother brings her child to the society and surrenders all right and claim to it. She is unable to provide for it and makes her "supreme sacrifice" in order that the child might be given that which God intended that he should have.

The Children's Aid Society of New York has been established for seventy-five years and placed thousands of children in homes all over the United States. All of the children were born of New York parents.

When children under 14 years old are placed in homes, officers of the society visit them twice a year. If the child is between 14 and 18 years of age, an officer of the society visits him in his new home at least once a year. After the child is 18 years old, he is not visited by the society officials as he is supposed to be old enough to take care of himself.

The society tries to be very careful in the placing of the children. Last night, the officials met with the Maryville committee and all applications for children were examined and the responsibility of the applicants determined.

Up to the present time, no children have been placed as the officials and committee intend to wait until all applications are received and selections made.

It is thought that all of the children brought here will be placed in good homes in Maryville and vicinity. Mr and Mrs. Swam will be here for about a week and will receive applications for the taking of the children brought to Maryville.

A few years ago, several children were taken to Baldwin, Kansas for the purpose of finding homes for them. There were three children in one family. A prominent doctor and his wife had decided to take two of them. The third, a small boy, began to cry and wanted to "go too." Finally, it was decided to take him. From last reports received, all three children are getting along fine, love their new "dad" and "mom" very much, and all three of them are going to school in Baldwin.

COUNTY TEAMS ARE FIGHTING FOR TITLE

PICKERING AND GUILFORD BOYS ARE PLAYING AT PRESS TIME

GYMNASIUM IS FILLED

Barnard, Quitman, Pickering and Guilford Boys Are In Semi-Final Plays This Afternoon

The basketball tournament of the Nodaway County indoor tournament was in progress all day. An unusual number of the games are being settled by the one point margin and it is hard to dope out the winners of the event in either girls or boys class. Pickering and Guilford were clashing at press time and this proves fair to be the elimination of one of the finalists, Skidmore, Parnell and Graham, three of the dark horses of the tourney were eliminatel early in the fray.

The gymnasium was filled this afternoon and a rare treat of basketball is being shown. The finals will be played tonight of both boys and girls.

The Pickering-Guilford game was going on at press time. Burks, center on Pickering squad, placed his team in the lead for the half in the last few minutes of play by shooting four straight field goals. This makes the score for the half 15 to 8 in favor of Pickerin.

The line-ups for the game was as follows:

Guilford—Bledsoe and Hagin, forwards; Ham, center, Curnutt and Reynolds, guards.

Pickering—Hood and Swinford, forwards; Burk, center, Gray and Zook, guards.

The girls game between the Guilford and Parnell game was sandwiched in between the halves of the Pickering Guilford game.

The games yet to be played this afternoon to clear off the semi-final round are as follows: Barnard vs. Quitman; Pickering vs. Guilford, for the boys contest. The winners of these two matches meet in the finals tonight. In the girls bracket, Guilford and Parnell meet in the semi-finals, Clearmont drawing a bye. The winner of the above match meets Clearmont in the finals tonight.

All of the games in the afternoon were played in seven and a half minute quarters.

Skidmore and Barnard paired off for the first game of the afternoon series: The half ended 4 to 2 in favor of Barnard. Inability of Skidmore forwards to shoot goal when openings were given kept the Skidmore score low. Barnard forwards were closely covered by the Skidmore guards. The game was never more than three points difference throughout.

AERIAL ATTACK DEFEATED BEAR CAST

MARYVILLE LONE TALLY IN SECOND QUARTER BY DROP-KICK

S. T. C. ON OFFENSE

Out-fought Mules and Made More First Downs—Passes and Fumbles Costly

After clearly outplaying the Warrensburg Mules for the first half, the Maryville Bearcats, unable to overcome the breaks of the game and the handicap of some costly fumbles, lost their game on the Central Teachers' gridiron yesterday 20 to 3. Maryville's lone taily came in the second quarter by a pretty 35-yard drop-kick by O'Banion, even though they were on the offensive most of the time. The Bearcats clearly out-fought the Warrensburg Teachers according to those, who saw the game and a record of the game shows that Lawrence's men made more first downs but lacked the punch at timely moments or ability to break up the Mules smoothly working passing machine.

Warrensburg brought its scoring machine into play by completing a 35-yard pass Descombe sto White on the goal line at the close of the second period. Facto kicked goal. They netted their second counter when White scooped up a Maryville fumble and raced fifty yards for a touchdown. The last tally came in the final period by a long pass to the 15-yard line and carried over by line bucks.

On account of hi sinjured ankle Masters did not go into the game until the last two minutes. Several of the Maryville men were bruised up in the game and taken out for a while. Akars, Hartman and Palmer went in during the game.

GRACE AND PEACE.—The Lord make his face shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee: the Lord lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace.—Numbers 6:25, 26.

A WORD AS TO AMERICAN "ALOOFNESS"

The resolutions committee of the American Bankers Association in its annual convention at Atlantic City, strenuously opposed Government aid to any class or industry, the soldiers' bonus, the increasing number of public employees, soaring wages and America's foreign policy of aloofness.

This is a osmewhat sweeping expression from a body of big business men that deserves more than passing notice.

It is fair to presume that the outspoken opposition to the soldiers' benus and "any class or industry" is intended to cover any legislation offering direct aid to the farmers, as well as to a privately owned merchant marine. If the latter is included then the Association may be said to be at least consistent.

The reference to America's aloofness, however, does not harmonize with the opposition to domestic assistance. The United States has been more than generous to almost every foreign nation in the world. As an illustration we might sight the liberal treatment accorded England in the settlement of its debt, but the case of France is more pronounced. The French Bureau of Information, in New York, calls special attention to the marvelous recovery of France from the devastation of war, and that the nation has also made immense loans to other nations. Much of that recovery has been made possible at the expense of American taxpayers. France owes them about $4,000,000,000 for the repayment of which no move has been made and no interest paid. In this one case American taxpayers are "chipping in" to the tune of about $170,000,000 a year in interest plus as much more to take care of the fund for the retirement of the debt. These debts may be paid later on but no move is being made in that direction now. The same conditions exist with nearly a dozen other nations in the same proportions.

Surely the American Bankers Association, fully cognizant of these facts, cannot accuse the American public of "aloofness"—especially when the chances are today against any of the principal being ever repaid.

The only other construction to apply to the resolution is that the United States should become embroiled to an extent that might require the presence of troops or marines on European soil. But that is a question that will be disposed of when the time comes. Just at present America is far more liberal with distressed foreign nations than with distressed products at home.

COUNTRY-BRED PRESIDENTS

In these times of higher education and specialization there is apt to be a smile at the old saying that any American boy may aspire to become President of the United States, and yet support for it may be found in the record. Nearly all our Presidents began life as country, village or small-town boys with few advantages at the start. The New York Times points out that Theodore Roosevelt was the only American President born in a great city, Cincinnati having only 150,000 inhabitants when Mr. Taft was born there. Only three Presidents were born in towns that afterwards became cities of some size—the two Adamses in Quincy, Mass., and Andrew Johnson in Raleigh, N. C. "All the other Presidents were born in villages or small towns or the actual country. Many of the Presidents were born on the farm, and all of them except Mr. Roosevelt had an essentially rural environment."

In the earlier times especially this was inevitable. During the first century of our national life most American boys were of country birth and breeding. This story of our Presidents may be a good deal modified before the end of our second century, and still more during the third, for within the past 25 years the United States has ceased to be predominantly agricultural and recently urban dwellers have become 50 per cent of our population. But even after the change that now seems promised, we are not likely to have a President or any great man who has not, at least for brief periods, known and loved the out-of-doors. The all-round man needs to know both town and country, and even if our majority in the future are city dwellers the automobile will enable them, without wealth, to become more or less "rural-minded" but the automobile will not make a boy President, at least not unless he makes the auto.

State prisons ought to be conducted on humanitarian lines and prisoners ought to be treated with such consideration as will protect society and make the best possible citizen out of the prisoner when he gets out but sympathy sometimes seems to run to the danger point, if it is sympathy. A St. Louis prisoner was recently paroled from the state penitentiary who had been sent up for a long term for murdering a policeman. He had been a model prisoner, according to accounts, and had served seven years and eight months of his term. He was arrest, with other men for burglary and was led to a patrol box when he suddenly produced a revolver and shot the policeman. He fired two more shots into the policeman's body after he lay on the ground. He then exchanged shots with another policeman guarding the other prisoners and got away. He afterwards got into a pistol duel with still another policeman and was captured. He was identified as one of the men who held up a business concern and as the murderer. His pal got one year for the burglary and he has served less than eight years. He is still a young man and he ought to be a greatly improved citizen if he is to run at large and mingle again with law abiding people.

Fishhook Hung From Kite To Catch Giant Tuna

To catch tuna and swordfish, kites are being used on the west coast to carry the hooks and bait far from the boats. After they are sent up, the fishing line is attached to the kite string which drags it over the water. When a fish bites, the sportsman reels it in close enough for a companion to strike with a harpoon. As some of the catches weigh from 100 to 300 pounds, lively battles take place. Rules of a club formed by fishermen permit only the angler and spear thrower to kill or gaff the fish. In contests, shooting disqualifies the participant. To be eligible for membership a candidate must land a tuna weighing at least 100 pounds or a swordfish of more than 200 pounds, using heavy tackle.

War Engines of Future To Be Electric

Electricity is to be a strong factor in future wars according to statements made by British experts who see in the discoveries of science a terrible power of destruction from mysterious waves of electric current sent through the air from hidden sources. Motors of airplanes and seacraft will be halted by special waves of wireless broadcast for thousands of miles, and even infantry and cavalry might be thrown into confusion or utterly destroyed by strong jets of water charged with electricity and mixed with acids. Machine guns and monster naval cannon, it is said, may be noiseless, and the projectiles will be "fired" by electric force. Sound made by electrically operated instruments will roar out over the battle fields with such a racket as to wreck the minds of opposing armies that dare to remain within hearing. Heat generated wirelessly will shoot out unseen over wide areas, destroying property and life without warning.

Erecting Supports for Aerials

A simple method of erecting supports for aerials, when height is not a great consideration, is to nail lengths of 2 by 2-in. wood to the roof as shown in the drawing. The supports are fastened on opposite sides of the roof, and are located over rafters, so that the spikes can be driven into these. The distance between the upper ends of the supports should be about 16 to 24 in. Ordinary porcelain insulators, which can be procured from any electrical store, are screwed to the ends of the supports and the aerial is attached to these. Care must, of course, be taken to have the aerial wires stretched as rigidly as possible so that they will not touch the roof.

Illuminating the Scale Beam

The difficulty in properly adjusting the weight on the beam of a scale in a small store, due to insufficient light, was remedied by providing a mirror set in the position shown, to reflect the light on the scale beam, the mirror being mounted on a triangular block. The light from the window opposite the scale was reflected so that the graduations could be seen distinctly, and at night the store lights were similarly reflected on the beam. The use of an electric light was first suggested but the mirror was found to serve the purpose just as well, and without the cost of burning an extra light.

Tracing Starter Troubles

Before blaming the starting motor or switch when the starter refuses to operate and the battery is known to be in good shape and fully charged, or nearly so, examine all terminals carefully, taking them off, cleaning thoroughly with a file or sandpaper, and scraping the battery post clamps inside and out. Very often there is nothing wrong except dirty or corroded terminals, and cleaning will remove the trouble at once. Keep the battery posts and clamps clean and covered with vaseline to prevent corrosion, and be especially careful about the ground connections, which in many cars collect dirt, and rust or corrode.

It is also good practice to examine the starting-motor cables occasionally, and to renew them if the insulation is badly frayed or there are broken strands.

NOV. 11, 1918

Five years since the ARMISTICE was signed! A long time, yes. But we are still too close to the World War for any of us to "grasp" what really happened and sense its connection with the future.

Under arms in the great war were 65 million men. Casualties totalled more than 37 millions. That tells only part of the story of horror. But it should be called daily to the attention of everyone.

Alas, memory is short. Humanity likes to forget the unpleasant side of life. That is why catastrophes like wars are repeated. One generation trying to forget, fails to impress indelibly on the minds of the rising generation the frightfulness, sorrow and futility of the battlefield.

Celebrate Armistice Day by teaching your children to hate war and all that goes with it. Forget the "glory" which is the camouflage of the militarists.

Thirty-seven million casualties! Tell them that.
Thirty-seven million casualties! Tell it again.
Thirty-seven million casualties! Never stop telling.

NEW SERVICE AT CHURCH IS POPULAR

"FIRESIDE" SERMONS TO BE CONTINUED BY REV. ALLISON

ARE VERY HOMELIKE

Audience is Made to Feel as Natural as Possible—Women to be Hostesses

"Our Personal God and His World" is the subject of the second of a series of "Fire Side Talks About God," which are being given at the Presbyterian Church by the Rev. S. P. Allison, on Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock at a series of unusual Sunday evening services called "Fire Side Services."

There are to be three such talks. The talk last Sunday laid the basis for the next two, though both of these are announced as complete in themselves. On Sunday the first talk was on the personality of God. The other talks are to deal with what that personality of God teaches about "God and His World" this Sunday, and "Our Personal God and Prayer" on November 18.

In the Sunday evening talk on "Our Personal God and His World" Mr. Allison, when interviewed, said he intends to take up the question of religion and science and show what light the personality of God throws on it. He also intends to go on to deal with how a personal God would feel toward men, and how men ought to feel toward such a God.

The women of the Missionary Society will be hostesses this Sunday evening. They will have charge of arranging the east room of the church into a "church living room" and will on Sunday evening do just what a hostess in her own home would do. Mr. Richman has planned with the Missionary Society women about some of the features of the music for Sunday.

Last Sunday evening a fine crowd showed that this type of informal, heart-to-heart service was like. The plan is to create the atmosphere of a family gathered about its fire-side. The songs are all chosen by the "family" and the scripture lesson on Sunday will be "family." Mr. Richman has asked memory verses volunteered by the that even his solo be chosen for him.

For these services rugs, easy chairs, floor lamps, table lamps, flowers, ferns, etc, are placed about the big church social room and the effect was said by those present last Sunday to be very homelike. On account of a defect in the hearth of the church fire-place it is necessary to use an artificial fire, but that is so constructed that it is very realistic.

"No Deposit Too Small"

The BROWN MOUSE

by Herbert Quick

COPYRIGHT BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

CHAPTER VIII.—Jim has Christmas dinner at Colonel Woodruff's, and listening to him, Jennie begins to do some thinking concerning his ability and his prospects.

CHAPTER IX.—In the evening Jim, as well as he knows how, courts Jennie, without, however, making much progress, though she is quickly losing her poor opinion of him.

CHAPTER X.—Jennie, elected county superintendent of schools, receives so many complaints from people of the district concerning Jim's methods of teaching that she finds herself compelled formally to ask for his resignation. After she has left, Jim is visited by Colonel Woodruff, who strongly urges him to refuse to resign, and offers to back him. Jim agrees to stick, for a while at least.

CHAPTER XI.—A meeting of the school board, which had been gathered to "get" Jim, is confronted by Jennie, who upholds him. He conducts an examination of his pupils at the meeting, to prove that he is not neglecting their "book learning" by the introduction of other subjects which he considers of importance. The splendid showing made by the children converts many, who had doubted, to his views.

CHAPTER XII.—The novel ideas which Jim has introduced have been talked about outside the county, and he is visited by Professor Withers, extension lecturer at the state university, who invites him to deliver an address at the next annual meeting of the Farmers' Institute.

CHAPTER XIII.—Professor Withers is impressed by many of the innovations made by Irwin, and so informs Colonel Woodruff and Jennie, somewhat to the astonishment of both. The colonel suggests to Jim that he (the colonel) seek election to the school board, replacing Cornelius Bonner, implacable enemy of Jim Irwin.

CHAPTER XIV.—Feigning sickness, Newton Bronson, youngster whom Irwin has redeemed from idleness and folly and set on the right path, and who almost worships the teacher, keeps his father from voting at the school board election. Bronson is a friend of Bonner, and would have voted for him. As it is, Colonel Woodruff is chosen for the position, owing to Bronson's absence.

CHAPTER XV.—Jim convinces the farmers of the district of the advantages to be derived from a co-operative creamery, and it is agreed to establish one. His rise to a position of leadership in the community, and high responsibility, has made a distinct difference in Jennie's feelings toward Jim, which she is forced to acknowledge to herself.

CHAPTER XVI.—In his address at the Farmers' Institute Jim makes a distinctly favorable impression. After the meeting he is offered a position as teacher in another district, with a considerable advance in salary, and agrees to consider it.

CHAPTER XVII.—Jim's friends urge him to remain at his present post, leading citizens of the district assuring him that they are "proud of him."

CHAPTER XVIII.—At a public meeting "Old Man" Simms, Buddy's father, tells of the good he and his family have derived from Jim's teaching and suggestions, and captures the gathering.

CHAPTER XIX.—Jim tells the meeting the various school improvements he will insist on having if he remains in his present position. Some of the oldtimers consider them almost revolutionary, but the majority approve. After the meeting, Jennie, for some reason, tells Jim she has been the "biggest little fool in the county."

CHAPTER XX

Theory and Practice.

Superintendent Jennie sat at her desk in no very satisfactory frame of mind. In the first place the court was to convene on the following Monday, so that her one-room office was not to be hers for a few days. To Wilbur Smythe, who did her the honor of calling occasionally, she remarked that if they didn't soon build the new courthouse so as to give her such accommodations as her office really needed, "they might take their old office—so there!"

"Fair woman," said Wilbur, as he creased his Prince Albert in a parting bow, "should adorn the home!"

"Bosh!" sneered Jennie, rather pleased, all the same, "suppose she isn't fair, and hasn't any home!"

This question of adorning a home was no nearer settlement with Jennie than it had ever been, though increasingly a matter of speculation. There were two or three men—rather good catches, too—who, if they were encouraged—but what was there to any of them? This is what Jennie asked her paper-weight as she placed it on a pile of unfinished examination papers. And the paper-weight echoed, "not a thing out of the ordinary!" And then, said Jennie, "Well, you little simpleton, who and what are you so out of the ordinary that you should sneer at Wilbur Smythe and Beckman Fifield and such men?" And echo answered, "What?"—and then the mail-carrier came in.

Down near the bottom of the pile she found this letter, signed by a southern state superintendent of schools, but dated at Kirkville, Missouri:

"I am a member of a party of southern educators—state superintendents in the main—en tour of the country to see what we can find of an instructive nature in rural school work. Professor Withers of Ames suggests that we visit your schools, and especially the rural school taught by a young man named Irwin, and I wonder if you will be free on next Monday morning, if we come to your office, to direct us to the place? If you could accompany us on the trip, and perhaps show us some of your other excellent schools, you would be honored and pleased."

And then came the shock—a party of state officials were coming into the county to study Jim Irwin's school! They would never come to study Wilbur Smythe's law practice—never in the world—or her work as county superintendent—never!—and Jim was getting seventy-five dollars a month, and had a mother to support. But there could be no doubt that there was something to Jim—the man was out of the ordinary. And wasn't that just what she had been looking for in her mind?

Jennie wired to her southerner for the number of his party, and secured automobiles for the trip. She sent a note to Jim Irwin telling of the prospective visitation. She would show all concerned that she could do some things, anyhow, and she would send these people on with a good impression of her county.

She was glad of the automobiles the next Monday morning, when at nine-thirty the train discharged upon her a dozen very alert, very up-to-date, very inquisitive southerners, male and female, most of whom seemed to have left their "r's" in the gulf region. It was eleven when the party parked their machines before the schoolhouse door.

"There are visitors here before us," said Jennie.

"Seems rather like an educational shrine," said Doctor Brathwayt of Mississippi. "How does he accommodate so many visitors in that small edifice?"

"I am not aware," said Jennie, "that he has been in the habit of receiving so very many from outside the district. Well, shall we go in?"

Once inside, Jennie felt a queer return of her old aversion to Jim's methods—the aversion which had caused her to criticize him so sharply on the occasion of her first visit. The reason for the return of the feeling lay in the fact that the work going on was the same sort, but of a more intense character. It was so utterly unlike a school as Jennie understood the word, that she glanced back at the group of educators with a little blush. The school was in a sort of uproar. Not that uproar of boredom and mischief of which most of us have familiar memories, but a sort of eager uproar, in which every child was intensely interested in the same thing; and did little rustling things because of this interest; something like the hum at a football game or a dog-fight.

On one side of the desk stood Jim Irwin, and facing him was a smooth stranger of the old-fashioned lightning-rod-agent type—the shallower and laxer sort of salesman of the kind whose sole business is to get signatures on the dotted line, and let some one else do the rest. In short, he was a "closer."

Standing back of him in evident distress was Mr. Cornelius Bonner, and grouped about were Columbus Brown, B. B. Hamm, Ezra Bronson, A. B. Talcott and two or three others from outside the Woodruff district. With envelopes in their hands and the light of battle in their eyes stood Newton Bronson, Raymond Simms, Bettina Hansen, Mary Smith and Angie Talcott, the boys filled with delight, the girls rather frightened at being engaged in something like a debate with the salesman.

As the latest-coming visitors moved forward, they heard the schoolmaster finishing his passage at arms with the salesman.

"You should not feel exasperated at us, Mr. Carmichael," said he in tones of the most complete respect, "for what our figures show. You are unfortunate in the business proposition you offer this community. That is all. Even these children have the facts to prove that the creamery outfit you offer is not worth within two thousand dollars of what you ask for it, and that it is very doubtful if it is the sort of outfit we should need."

"I'll bet you a thousand dollars—" began Carmichael hotly, when Jim waved him down.

"Not with me," said Jim. "Your friend, Mr. Bonner, there, knows what chance there is for you to bet even a thousand cents with me. Besides, we know our facts, in this school. We've been working on them for a long time."

"Bet your life we have!" interpolated Newton Bronson.

"Before we finish," said Jim, "I want to thank you gentlemen for bringing in Mr. Carmichael. We have been reading up on the literature of the creamery promoter, and it is a very fine thing to have one in the flesh with whom to—to—demonstrate, if Mr. Carmichael will allow me to say so."

Carmichael looked at Bonner, made an expressive motion with his head toward the door, and turned as if to leave.

"I'll Bet You a Thousand Dollars," Cried Carmichael Hotly.

"Well," said he, "I can do plenty of business with real men. If you want to make the deal I offer you, and I can show you from the statistics I've got at the hotel that it's a special deal just to get started in this part of the state, and carries a thousand dollars of cut in price to you—let's leave these children and this he schoolma'am and get something done."

"I can't allow you to depart," said Jim more gently than before, "without thanking you for the very excellent talk you gave us on the advantage of the co-operative creamery over the centralizer. We in this school believe in the co-operative creamery, and if we can get rid of you, Mr. Carmichael, without buying your equipment, I think your work here may be productive of good."

"He's off three or four points on the average overrun in the Wisconsin co-ops," said Newton.

"And we thought," said Mary Smith, "that we'd need more cows than he said to keep up a creamery of our own."

"Oh," replied Jim, "but we mustn't expect Mr. Carmichael to know the subject as well as we do, children. He makes a practice of talking mostly to people who know nothing about it—and he talks very well. All in favor of thanking Mr. Carmichael please say 'Aye.'"

CHAPTER XXI

A New Era Dawns.

There was a rousing chorus of "Aye!" in which Mr. Carmichael, followed closely by Mr. Bonner, made his exit. B. B. Hamm went forward and shook Jim's hand slowly and contemplatively, as if trying to remember just what he should say.

"James E. Irwin," said he, "you've saved us from being skinned by the smoothest grafter that I ever seen."

"Not I," said Jim; "the kind of school I stand for, Mr. Hamm, will save you more than that—and give you the broadest culture any school ever gave. A culture based on life. We've been studying life, in this school—the life we all live here in this district."

"He had a smooth partner, too," said Columbus Brown. Jim looked at Bonner's little boy in one of the front seats and shook his head at Columbus warningly.

"If I hadn't herded 'em in here to ask you a few questions about co-operative creameries," said Mr. Talcott, "we'd have been stuck—they pretty near had our names. And then the whole neighborhood would have been sucked in for about fifty dollars a name."

"I'd have gone in for two hundred," said B. B. Hamm.

"May I call a little meeting here for a minute, Jim?" asked Ezra Bronson. "Why, where's he gone?"

"They's some other visitors come in," said a little girl, pulling her apron in embarrassment at the teacher's absence.

Jim had, after what seemed to Jennie an interminable while, seen the county superintendent and her distinguished party, and was now engaged in welcoming them and endeavoring to find them seats—quite an impossible thing at that particular moment, by the way.

"Don't mind us, Mr. Irwin," said Doctor Brathwayt. "This is the best thing we've seen on our journeyings. Please go on with the proceedin's. That gentleman seems to have in mind the perfectin' of some so't of organization. I'm intensely interested."

"I'd like to call a little meetin' here," said Ezra to the teacher. "Seein' we've busted up your program so far, may we take a little while longer?"

"Certainly," said Jim. "The school will please come to order."

The pupils took their seats, straightened their books and papers, and were at attention. Doctor Brathwayt nodded approvingly as if at the answer to some question in his mind.

"Children," said Mr. Irwin, "you may or may not be interested in what these gentlemen are about to do—but I hope you are. Those who wish may be members of Mr. Bronson's meeting. Those who do not prefer to do so may take up their regular work."

"Gentlemen," said Mr. Bronson to the remains of Mr. Carmichael's creamery party, "we've been cutting bait in this neighborhood about long enough. I'm in favor of fishing, now. How many here favor building a co-operative creamery if we can get the farmers in with cows enough to make it profitable, and the equipment at the right price?"

Each man held up a hand.

"Here's one of our best farmers not voting," said Mr. Bronson, indicating Raymond Simms. "How about you, Raymond?"

"Ah reckon paw'll come in," said Raymond blushingly.

"He will if you say so," said Mr. Bronson.

Raymond's hand went up amid a ripple of applause from the pupils, who seemed glad to have a voter in their ranks.

"Unanimous!" said Mr. Bronson. "It is a vote! Now I'd like to hear a motion to perfect a permanent organization to build a creamery. Mr. Irwin will you please act as secretary."

Jim sat down at the desk and began making notes. The meeting appointed committees, fixed upon a time for a future meeting, threw a collection of half-dollars on the desk to start a petty cash fund, made the usual joke about putting the secretary under bond, adjourned and dispersed.

"It's a go this time!" said Newton to Jim.

"I think so," said Jim, "with those men interested. Well, our study of creameries has given a great deal of language work, a good deal of arithmetic, some geography, and finally saved the people from a swindle. Rather good work, Raymond!"

"My mother has a delayed luncheon ready for the party," said Jennie to Jim. "Please come with us—please!"

But Jim demurred. Getting off at this time of day was really out of the question if he was to be ready to show the real work of the school in the afternoon session.

"This has been rather extraordinary," said Jim, "but I am very glad you were here. It shows the utility of the right sort of work in letter-writing, language, geography and arithmetic—in learning things about farming."

"It certainly does," said Doctor Brathwayt. "I wouldn't have missed it under any consideration; but I'm certainly sorry for that creamery shark and his accomplice—to be routed by the Fifth Reader grade in farming!"

The luncheon was rather a wonderful affair—and its success was unqualified after everybody discovered that the majority of those in attendance felt much more at home when calling it dinner.

"What d'ye think of our schools?" asked the colonel.

"Well," said Professor Gray, "it's not fair to judge, Colonel, on what must have been rather an extraordinary moment in the school's history. I take it that you don't put on a representation of 'The Knave Unmasked' every morning."

"It was more like a caucus than I've ever seen it, daddy," said Jennie, "and less like a school."

"Don't you think," said Doctor Brathwayt, "that it was less like a school because it was more like life? It was life. If I am not mistaken, history of this community was making in that schoolroom as we entered."

"You're perfectly right, Doctor," said the colonel. "Jim's got too big for the district, and so we're going to enlarge the district, and the schoolhouse, and the teaching force, and the means of educational grace generally. That's as sure as can be—after what took place this morning."

"He's rather a wonderful person to be found in such a position," said Professor Gray, "or would be in any region I have visited."

"He's a native product," said the colonel, "but a wonder all the same. He's a Brown Mouse, you know."

"A—a—?" Doctor Brathwayt was plainly astonished. And so the colonel was allowed to tell again the story of the Darbishire brown miee, and why he called Jim Irwin one. Doctor Brathwayt said it was an interesting Mendelian explanation of the appearance of such a character as Jim. "And if you are right, Colonel, you'll lose him one of these days. You can't expect to retain a Caesar, a Napoleon, or a Lincoln in a rural school, can you?"

"I don't know about that," said the colonel. "The great opportunity for such a Brown Mouse may be in this very school, right now. He'd have as big an army right here as Socrates ever had. The Brown Mouse is the only judge of his own proper place."

"I think," said Mrs. Brathwayt, as they motored back to the school, "that your country schoolmaster is rather terrible. The way he crushed that Mr. Carmichael was positively merciless. Did he know how cruel he was?"

"I think not," said Jennie. "It was the truth that crushed Mr. Carmichael."

"But that vote of thanks," said Mrs. Brathwayt. "Surely that was the bitterest irony."

"I wonder if it was," said Jennie. "No, I am sure it wasn't. He wanted to leave the children thinking as well as possible of their victim, and especially of Mr. Bonner; and there was really something in Mr. Carmichael's talk which could be praised. I have known Jim Irwin since we were both children, and I feel sure that if he had had any idea that his treatment of this man had been unnecessarily cruel, it would have given him a lot of pain."

"My dear," said Mrs. Brathwayt, "I think you are to be congratulated for having known for a long time a genius."

"Thank you," said Jennie. And Mrs. Brathwayt gave her a glance which brought to her cheek another blush; but of a different sort from the one provoked by the uproar in the Woodruff school.

There could be no doubt now that Jim was thoroughly wonderful—nor that she, the county superintendent, was quite as thoroughly a little fool. She to be put in authority over him! It was too absurd for laughter. Fortunately, she hadn't hindered him [illegible] was it owing to any wisdom of hers? Well, she had decided in his favor, in those first proceedings to revoke his certificate. Perhaps that was as good a thing to remember as was to be found in the record.

A Jack O'lantern marked the entrance to the corn field which led to the "Lone House." Another Jack O'lantern glared at the guests from the "Lone Pine." The guests were greeted at the gate by two ghosts who seized them and bore them away to the "Cave of Horrors." From here they were escorted to the Witches den where the witch met them and gave them their fortune. The guests were then escorted into the "Lone House" which was decorated with black cats, witches, bats, Jack O'lanterns, yellow and black paper autumn leaves and fodder.

The House was dimly lighted by grinning Jack O'lanterns. Here the guests remained until all had arrived when they were asked to read their fortune. After the reading of the fortunes the guests bobbed for apples and attempted to bite apples from strings. Much merriment was caused by these contests.

The remainder of the time was spent in dancing until eleven o'clock when refreshments were served. The refreshments consisted of pressed chicken, sandwiches, pickles, doughnuts and pumpkin pie. After this the lights were extinguished and a ghostly fire was lighted in the center of the room and the remainder of the time was spent in telling ghost stories. Hosea Torrance has at his meat market an animal called marsupial by naturalists. It was captured in this county, and was probably the only one in the county. It is in fact the only one we have ever seen here, except one in a menagerie. Hosea sets a high value on his prize, and talks of sending it to Barnum.

On Monday night last, the passenger train that passed by this place at 8 o'clock, going south, with Ed Wolfers as conductor, was fired into three miles this side of St. Joseph, but nobody was hurt. Next morning, Daniel W. and James Wadkins were arrested, confessed the crime, and are now in jail in St. Joseph. We hope to see them receive the full punishment warranted by law.

On Saturday last, we paid a visit to Hopkins, the new and prosperous little town located near the Iowa line, and confess that we were astonished at the progress made by the town and the business transacted there. They have a neat little church, a handsome and well finished new hall, grocery stores, dry goods stores, drug stores, harware stores, lumber yard and other kinds of fine store buildings, but "nary a saloon."

WE'RE STARVING CHILDREN'S SOULS

IS CHARGE MADE LAST NIGHT BY HAMILTON

13 "HIT THE TRAIL"

Making a Total of 109 Conversions—"Marriage and Home" was Theme Last Night

Nodaway County parents are starving the souls of their children, declared Evangelist O. E. Hamilton of the tabernacle meeting last night. He branded this neglect as a 'damning sin,'' and charged that parents cannot be true to the greatest needs of the children whom they love if they neglect their spiritual training.

The largest week night attendance since the opening of the meeting was present last night. "Marriage and Home'' was the theme of the service. Thirteen persons, "hit the trail,'' making a total of 109 for the meeting thus far. Several new members were baptized last night and there will be baptismal services again tonight.

Mr. Hamilton in his sermon, asserted that visitation to the schools of the county revealed lack of spiritual training of the children. "Several of the schools have but two or three who are actually attending some Bible school regularly,'' he said. "This must be looked upon and thought of as a disgrace to this community. And yet there are those in all our churches here who say the field is worked, that there is nothing more to be done.''

"There must be two bears in every home'' and these are bear and forbear. Too many times there is more bear than forbear and trouble comes as a result. Love and loyalty are the two vital things necessary to a happy and peaceful home life.''

A large attendance is expected tomorrow night. The men's Bible class will meet in the Odd Fellows Hall in the morning and listen in to the chapel program broadcasted from Omaha.

Seats will be reserved tomorrow night fo rthe young people of the county.

Allen & Son Feeding for Chicago Show

The following is taken from the Chicago Daily Drovers Journal of October 23:

John L. Allen & Son, prominent feeders of Conception Junction, Mo., have thrown their hats in the ring in the International Fat Stock Show with the announcement that they have on feed 86 head of Hereford steers bred and raised in Texas.

These steers were purchased as calves from the Des Moines Live Stock Exchange last November They were started immediately on ground corn and clover hay. Net gain from time of purchase to April first amounted to an average of two pounds a day. About this time a pound of oil meal was added to the ration, while they had access to a bluegrass pasture during the day From June 1 the oil meal was doubled. About the first of October they went in the dry lots for the finishing touches, when Champion molasses feed was added.

On Aug. 28 21 head of the poorest were culled out and shipped to the Kansas City market, averaging 1011 pounds and selling at 12 cents, top for the day.

The feeding of these cattle has been followed with much interest by farmers in Nodaway county, as it represented one of the first shipments of Texas Herefords into this section. These cattle are being fed alongside a group of well-bred natives, and in the judgment of those who have been watching the experiment the Texas cattle are doing equally as well.

To Give Armistice Program at Conception

Clearmont boys were matched against the Graham boys for the next round. The Graham boys showed a decided improvement in form over the runner-up team of last year and took the measure of the Clearmont boys in a fashion. Elliott stared for Graham by his spectacular long shots and good dribbling down field.

SKELETON OF TRAPPER FOUND BY NEGRO

St. Louis, Nov. 10—A negro janitor at the court house was whistling to himself blissfully when he prepared to clean out a closet in a basement, which had been closed for many years.

The hinges were rusty, and the door opened slowly.

There was a peculiar rattle.

The whistle died on the negroe's lips. His eyes swelled out, and his limbs lost their firmness.

"Lawdy," he ejaculated.

When he recovered use of his feet, there was a dark streak that faded out in the direction of the doorway.

Behind him on the floor lay a heap of white bones—human bones.

The skeleton was dug from its grave in Montana in 1897, and was used November 16 of that year, as an exhibit in an ejectment suit filed by heirs of Sublette to show they were lawful owners of the title to a piece of land south of Forest Park.

Between 1836 and 1861 all the children of Phillip and Isabella Sublette who had moved to Kentucky and then to Missouri had died. A grandchild, Esther Frances Sublette, who had inherited the piece of land involved in the law suit, died May 16, 1861. She was believed to have been the last direct descendant except Pinkey W. Sublette, the trapper. The trapper did not die until 1865, and therefore inherited the property.

This was the point upon which the plaintiffs based their claim to the farm, and to prove Sublette's death, they went to Montana, found the grave with a headstone on which was engraved "P. W. S." and dug up the remains, bringing it to St. Louis.
